INFANT BURIALS IN ROMAN VILLAS

Laura Thompson-Woodland

University of St. Thomas

Burials of children and adults within Roman villas are not uncommon and generally date after the villas were abandoned.

This research was made possible in part by the Grants and Research Office

Trench 11 in 2013

amphora or pithos (a large storage jar). There were several small stones placed in a formation along one side of the infant burial. ( Below)

Possible infant burial under a broken

Sv. Klement, Croatia

Points of Interest

In 2011 I found some skeletal fragments under roof tiles within a room in Trench 4. (Above)